10. Saturation point

This vivid space by Milan-based practice Aptitude sees coloured concrete used in the style of Mexican architect Luis Barragán's masterful application, but in shades of raspberry, amber and bluish-grey. In an extension of the playful palette, even the Kast Concrete basin was chosen to match the colour scheme – in a space this small, details count. aptitudestudio.it

11. Clash of the titans

Zingy chartreuse-coloured tiles from Fireclay Tile and a monochrome marble vanity unit from Artistic Tile playfully compete for attention in this bathroom by interior designer Cara Woodhouse. Set within a home in San Diego, the space champions clashing colours and materials, and is proof that small spaces can be daring too. carawoodhouse.com

12. Double take

This retro bathroom, designed by Design Republic for LinkedIn's New York office, is a lesson in mirroring. Matching basins set into 'Pacifica' universal green terrazzo vanity tops by Concrete Collaborative sit under two oval-shaped mirrors that reflect the same configuration opposite, creating a hall of mirrors effect. The studio used Sarah Sherman Samuel's 'Strands' tiles for Concrete Collaborative in moss green. designrepublic.us.com
